Overview

ABSTRACT

There are a range of questions that had not been unanswered regarding interventions to address the prevalence and vulnerability of OVCs in African countries including Kenya. Questions have been raised as to whether interventions should focus specifically on OVCs, or whether they should address poverty and vulnerability in general. Similarly, the choice of the type of intervention, be it cash transfers, education-enhancing measures, or health care is also very important to ensure that scarce resources are utilized in a most effective manner.

This project aimed to provide evidence to inform current and future initiatives for OVCs in poor urban areas. Data from the Nairobi Urban Health and Demographic Surveillance System (NUHDSS) and an additional module to assess the psychosocial wellbeing of OVCs were used, a work program comprising the identification of qualifying beneficiaries and assessment of their economic welfare as well as of the targeting methods was carried out.

The specific objectives of the project were to: conduct regression analyses to explain child welfare indicators (including the psycho-social wellbeing of OVC, a research area that had been untouched) and applied a reliable and valid method of proxy means testing (PMT) to identify households for interventions based on their income or other related socio-economic status indicator.

UNITS OF ANALYSIS

The unit of analysis is the child

Scope

Supervision

The field supervisors and team leaders participated in data collection in addition to the supervisory role as stipulated in the field worker's manual.

Additional tasks included quality control through spot checks of interviews and scripts, data cleaning, work assignments, follow-up cases, community liaison.

The team also consisted of editors, who were primarily involved in the data cleaning.

The field co-ordinator, research officer and/or project managers visited the field and field teams regularly to monitor and review progress and support field operations

Data Processing

Data Editing

Data editing took place at a number of stages throughout the processing, including:

- a) Office editing and coding
- b) During data entry
- c) Structure checking and completeness
- d) Secondary editing

Other Processing

Data entry was performed manually at APHRC's headquarters on desktop computers and was done using an in-house built system with a Microsoft Visual Basic and MS SQL softwares.

Data were processed the following steps:

- 1) Questionnaire reception
- 2) Office editing and coding
- 3) Data entry
- 4) Structure and completeness checking
- 7) Back up of raw data
- 8) Export to STATA 10 in 12 files
- 9) Recoding of variables needed for analysis
- 10) Structural checking of STATA 12 files
- 11) Data quality tabulations
- 12) Production of analysis tabulations
